

WeddingWhoop.com - The Wedding Shoe Game & Questions

What is the Wedding Shoe Game? How to Play it.

The game is usually introduced by the DJ, either straight after dinner, or during the party time.

The shoe game is a fun wedding reception party game for the bride and groom, which tests how much they know each other - in a fun and hilarious way. The game is played by putting two chairs back to back in the center of the party room or dance-floor - where the guests can see them. The bride and the groom then sit on the chairs back to back, so they are facing away from each other.

They are then asked to remove both their shoes and exchange one of their shoes with each other - so that the groom has his shoe in one hand and the bride's shoe in the other. The bride also has her shoe in one hand and the groom's shoe in the other.

The party DJ or the reception host then asks the fun shoe game questions and the happy couple answer the questions by holding up either their shoe, or their partner's shoe to answer the question. This game is usually introduced as 'who knows who better?'. Then questions like "who looks better in white?" are asked and the bride and groom can raise a shoe to answer. Sometimes their answers may not match and this is how the hilarity begins, especially if you have great questions to ask.

You can even have the audience bet on who will give the most correct answer or you can also let guests think of some ideas and ask fun questions. If everyone is in a good party mood then you can have some fun and naughty questions, too.

By the way, you don't have to use shoes, I've seen this game played with many different objects for answering the questions, some examples are; pink and blue teddy bears, pink and blue slippers, colored flags, photos of the bride and groom, pink and blue maracas, hand clappers, fairy wand and sword. If you don't want to use shoes then you can be creative and think of a funny alternative.
